

THE CHURCH THAT LOVE IS

The Church that love is, is one that speaks to me more about God than about the devil more about heaven than about hell more about beauty than about sin more about freedom than about restraint more about hope than about fear more about love than about immorality ... more about Christian than about herself more about the hurting world than about angels more about the hunger of the poor than about collaboration with the rich more about the good than about the bad more about what is permitted to me than what is forbidden to me more about today than about yesterday

The Church that love is, not only does not fear those who open up new paths, but encourages and protects them.
It is the one who prefers to honour saints while they are alive.
.. The one who does not reject anything new before having tried it ...
The one more concerned about being simple and open to the light, than about being powerful more worried about being true than about being dogmatic ...

It is the church which always has the fire lighted for all who are cold and lonely; the bread newly baked for all who are hungry, the door being opened, the lamp lighted and the bed made for all who walk the road of life, tired, failing, and in search of a truth and a love they have not yet found.
